

| x1 | SS |

KENNETH T. WHITBY AWARD

“Recognizes outstanding technical contributions to aerosol science and technology by a young scientist. The purpose of the award is to encourage continued work in the field.”

2011
AWARDEE

ATHANASIOS NENES

Georgia Institute of Technology

- Ph.D. Chemical Engineering – California Institute of Technology (2002)
- Over 100 referred journal articles cited nearly 3,000 times
- “... a unique ability to translate physical and chemical concepts into efficient numerical codes...”
- “... rapidly established himself as one of the world’s experts on the climatic effects of atmospheric aerosols”
- “... among the most accomplished atmospheric scientists of his generation”

27.75”

22”